St. Mary's students and faculty enjoyed some old-fashioned fun with a new twist. Teachers and volunteers took the Milton Bradley game "Go to the Head of the Class" and brought it to life during Catholic Schools Week. The object of the game was to move through the game board until you reached graduation. Children in Kindergarten through Eighth Grades were paired together to form teams from three different grade levels. The idea was to promote teamwork and to reinforce classroom lessons. Students took on the roll of game pieces and dice throwers while the rest of their teammates answered questions in Religion, Science, Math, Language, Art & Music and Social Studies. Our teachers prepared questions using student lessons and tests. The roll of the dice determined the category and teammates had to decide together their answer. If they were correct, they got to move ahead the number rolled on the die.

St. Mary's School in Vineland continues to look for innovative ways to boost children's interest in learning and to motivate them to want to learn more.
